INCEPTION: 2 NOVEMBER 2020

Differences in performance between the Munro Global Growth Fund and MAET (ASX quoted Fund) relate to their respective inception dates, the buy/sell spread of the iNAV for MAET.ASX, the timing difference between the issuing of units during the day on the ASX for MAET and the purchase of units in the Munro Global Growth Fund at the end of the day. This may result in reporting small differences in performance.

MONTHLY SUMMARY

The Munro Global Growth Fund returned 3.1% for October. Long equities contributed 0.3% to performance, currency hedging contributed 2.8% and the contribution from short equities (+0.1%) was offset by hedge positions (-0.1%). Global markets were supported by monetary policy and strong corporate earnings throughout October. However, market volatility increased as the US Presidential Election and investor positioning into quarterly results reporting took over the headlines. Climate stock, GE Vernova had another strong month after management provided bullish outlooks for their Power and Electrification segments. High Performance Computing position Nvidia rose to all-time highs amid positive commentary around the supply and magnitude of demand for their Blackwell chip. TSMC within the Connectivity Aol delivered a compelling beat and raise result which further established their position as the world's leading semiconductor foundry. Detractors for the month included ASML (High Performance Computing), which reported orders well below market expectations whilst lowering their 2025 guidance. The ASML result affected other semi-conductor companies, such as KLA Corporation, despite reporting a solid set of results that were consistent with longer term targets. Microsoft (Digital Enterprise) guided to a deceleration in the growth of Azure for their next quarter, which is largely driven by continued supply constraints. Currency exposure is 50% hedged back to AUD.
